Help a Hero Heal

Some battles are not fought on the battlefield.

Our soldiers and their family members need our help. The past 10 years of conflict, often involving multiple deployments and extended separations, have created unprecedented stressors. Some soldiers or family members turn to alcohol and drugs to help them cope. We are committed to ensure that no member of the Army Family has to face the challenges of dealing with substance abuse alone.

As the stigma of seeking treatment for substance abuse and co-occurring disorders has decreased, more soldiers and family members are coming forward to seek help. We have a critical shortage of counseling psychologists and social workers to provide treatment.

Now more than ever, we need civilians to step up and lend a hand to those who have sacrificed so much to defend our freedom.
