

OUCAN: Plug Into Clean Energy!

Ohio University Climate Action Now (OUCAN) is hosting a kick-off event to bring together all individuals, groups, organizations, and networks involved in any work related to climate disruption and safeguarding the environment.

Tuesday, March 17

6:30-8:30 PM

Nelson Commons

(The large room behind the cafeteria)

OU is in the early phases of planning a major restructuring of its energy infrastructure as part of an even larger master plan for the university (<http://ohiomasterplan.mindmixer.com/>). Given the talent and open-mindedness of the university personnel involved, the scale of the financial commitments and opportunities, and the truly exciting and forward-thinking energy revolution being modeled at universities around the nation, OU is at a truly historic cross-road. We will either revise the university's energy infrastructure based on continuing reliance on fossil fuel, or we will move immediately and affirmatively toward truly sustainable energy.

No choice is more important to OU's future, to our students' future and to the future of the natural world. CLIMATE ACTION NOW!

More info: www.facebook.com/OU.ClimateActionNOW

